DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments filed 3-24-06 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant contends Rockey and Chevillon do not anticipate the claims because the devices are intended for different anatomical parts. The Examiner disagrees because the claim limitations do not provide a structural novelty over the devices disclosed by Rockey or Chevillon. Furthermore, anatomical structures vary in size from infant to adult humans as well as from different species of mammals so the devices disclosed by Rockey and Chevillon are capable of the intended use recitations of the current claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Rockey WO 88/05671.

Rockey discloses at pages 3,4, and 7-11 and figures a medical implant comprising a hollow body having first tube-like section, second tube-like section, adjusting means, and fixing means capable of meeting the intended use recitations.

3. Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Chevillon et al. US 2002/0022891.

Chevillon et al. discloses in figures 5-6 and paragraphs 61-72 and 106-111 a medical device comprising a hollow body having first tube-like section, second tube-like section, adjusting means, and fixing means capable of meeting the intended use recitations.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claims 13-17 are allowed.
